Is these days of epidemics, says an exchange, it is well to take every precaution against the spread of disease. One of the most favorable conditions for the extension of epidemies is said to lie in the sprinkling of streets. This is stated to be so by so eminent an authority as Dr. Koch, of Germany. In Philadelphia the physicians are getting waked up to the dangers of this innocent-looking practice, some of the leading members of the profession having declared that the Board of Health should put a stop to it on the streets of the city, or at least moon such streets as a ron tentriely the Board of Health should put a stop to it on the streets of the city, or at least upon such streets as are not entirely clean. They say just what Dr. Koch says, that the hot sun causes evaporation from the fifth of the streets which is full of disease germs. These germs by this process become active and poison the air by their presence. If the streets were entirely clear, these gentlemen admit that there would be much that is benefi-cial in the sprinkling process. There are cial in the sprinkling process. There are those in the medical profession who do not hesitate to say that the sprinkling of nestrate to say that the sprinkling of such streets as contain any considerable quantity of dirt is one of the most dan-gerous practices which can threaten the city's health.
